Introduction

This chapter details various records of the deaths of Fulcher people, starting with the British casualties from the first and second world wars, 1914-18 and 1939-1945, as recorded by the Commonwealth War Graves Commission.

CWGC INDEX

We have not been able to identify all of those men who fell and who have graves in various locations throughout the world. Each casualty is marked with an identification number, and, where possible, the family tree code, followed by the grave information that was/is known by the CWGC, as well as any information that we have been able to add.

The information includes the casualties name or initials, when they died, where they are buried or commemorated, their rank, their regiment or service, their age (where known), their service number, their nationality, the theatre of war, and any other information, such as names of parents and their address. More information about the casualties may be found in the relevant family section in Chapter 6 of this book.

If you can assist with identification of those that whose families we have been unable to identify, or add a picture or more information about their lives, please contact us.

This is not a record of those who served; only of those who died and have graves with gravestones.

There are 62 men from 1914 to 1918 and a further 19 from 1939 to 1945.

Son of Walter and Edith Maud Fulcher of Dagenham. In the late afternoon of Tuesday 11th November, Sgt Pilot Keith Bryant was detailed to ferry X3135 over to Dunholme Lodge. The pilot took along two members of the ground crew, LAC Andrew Wilson and AC2 Walter Fulcher. The Hampden was seen to make a steep left hand turn before crashing into the ground at Hackthorn Hall, north east of Scampton aerodrome; tragically, all onboard were killed.

BURIAL

Vryheid Cemetery

3833 Private J W Fulcher, 2nd Battalion the (King's Own) Royal Lancaster Regiment (not South Lancashire Regiment as on the cemetery memorial). The battalion deployed to South Africa for the Second Anglo Boer War, sailing on the Dilwara on 2 Dec 1899 and arrived on 25 Dec 1899. Along with the 2nd Lancashire Fusiliers, the 1st South Lancashire Regiment, and the 1st York and Lancaster Regiment, they formed the 11th Brigade under Major General Woodgate. They were sent to Durban to take part in the relief of Ladysmith. They were part of the attack on Spion Kop on 23/24 Jan 1900 (37 killed, over 100 wounded and about 50 missing). They were at Vaal Krantz 5-7 Feb 1900 and in the battle of Tugela Heights 13-27 Feb 1900 (30 killed, and 153 wounded). After the relief of Ladysmith they took part in the advance north to the Transvaal and were at the taking of Alleman's Nek on 11 Jun. They were then deployed to the Vryheid area. Private Fulcher died of wounds at Vryheid, Natal. He is also commemorated on the (King's Own) Royal Lancaster Regiment Boer War memorial in Lancaster Priory (St Mary's Church), Castle Hill, Lancaster, Lancashire, England (see: <https://www.warmemorialsonline.org.uk/memorial/258813/>).
